INSPECTOR BYENES'S TRIP.

His Visit to the Scene of Outrages by Aque-

Inspector Byrnes returned to this city early this morning after an eventful day. He made a tour of the scene of the Aqueduct outrages, learned much about the depredations that had been committed along the line of the Bronx River, and extended his journey to Albany, presumably in connection with the Albany bond robbery.

He was very reticent on the subject of the raids by Aqueduct men, and when saked what detectives Crowley and Maguire had learned during their trip to the shafts, he said during their trip to the shafts, he said:

"That is a matter I cannot talk about yet."
The fact remains that Inspector Byrnes and his staff stand ready to assist the local authorities. The Inspector is not averse to discussing the question from a general standpoint, but becomes silent when pressed to tell what he and his trained detectives are doing.

"I can imagine how alarmed the property owners along the line of the Aqueduct are," he said, "If their poultry, cattle and other property is stolen, naturally they become terrorized, and they dread more serious offenses against their wives and children who may be left unprotected all day. The law officers along the line are few and far between, and are unable to cope with any premeditated raid by those who are bent upon mischief or plunder—and they must look for aid where there is power to compel obedience mischief or plunder—and they must look for aid where there is power to compel obedience aid where there is power to compel obedience to the law."

There is a greater feeling of security in Westchester and adjoining counties since it became known that inspector Byrnes and his men and his men were believed to be interesting themselves in the cause of enforcing order in that region and it is reported that last night was very quiet, the laborers keeping close to their shanties and boarding-houses.

The detectives do not believe that there is any organized society like the Mollie Maguires, but are satisfied that the bulk of the laborers are led by a few unprincipled exconvicts, who have secured employment in the Aqueduct shafts so as to cover their tracks.

C. BARREZ & CO.'S EXPLANATION.

Not Satisfactory to the Collector, Who Or ders the Goods Seized.

Collector Magone conducted an investiga tion to-day into the charges against the im porting firm of C. Barrez & Co. and listened the explanation given by the different members of the firm.

The examination lasted from 10 in the morning until 12. The explanation did not satisfy the Collector, who ordered that the satisfy the Collector, who ordered that the goods, 161 cases that are now in the custody of the customs officials, be seized, and that the case for the recovery of the duties be prosecuted in the courts. There was a good deal of bickering in the cross-examination of the witnesses, and both sides, including the Collector himself, seemed several times to be a little wired. a little mixed.

The most dramatic situation of the other.

wise tedious testimony was when Mr. Barrez pleadingly said: "For God's sake, Mr. Col-lector, let me have my goods, so that I can deliver them."

deliver them."

He promised to do anything that might be asked of him, but it was of no use, for the Collector was obdurate. Mr. Barrez also said that if he could not get the goods within five days to deliver them to the purchasers he would have to make an assignment.

A Respectable Man in Hard Luck.

Thirty-seven homeless men who applied for lodg-ings at the Oak street station last night were charged with vagrancy at the Tombathia morning. Justice Weide gave them each a month in the Workhouse, with the exception of G. A. Bedeil, worknoise, with the exception of G. A. Bedell, who on being questioned said:

'Judge, I'm not a vagrant. I arrived in this city reserds looking for work. My money gave out and I went to the station-house to pass the night. Here, Your Honor, is a letter from the two United States Schators of Texas certifying to my character."

Bedell was discharged.

If the deadlock in the committee should continue, New York will not have a representative in the National Committee. This would cost one vote in the selection of a place to hold the convention and might result in the naming of Chicago or some other Western city.

"No, I won't."

When asked if he would say anything in regard to the report as told him, he replied;

"No, I won't."

"Not even by denying it is false, or affirming it if true?" asked the reporter.

He replied: "No, I won't."

Then the reporter made a last attempt and asked Mr. George if he would say anything in regard to this matter, and to this Mr. George replied:

"No, I won't!"

After thanking Mr. George the reporter withdrew.

CURTIES ON THE RACK.

Donying that He Swindled Nuttail's Friend by Getting Money for Restitution.

Deputy Assistant District. Attorney Parker continued to turn on the cross-examining press in which he had Charles A. Curtiss in Part III. of the Court of General Sessions this morning.

That individual did not appear to like the squeezing process. He was testifying in his own behalf to escape punishment under an indictment for grand larceny in obtaining money under the false pretense that it was to make restitution and secure the release of John Nuttall, of South Brooklyn, under a suspended sentence.

The blond head was bowed over the hands which could not keep each other still, and the slender body wriggled about in the witness chair at each twist of the interrogatory ness chair at each twist of the interrogatory screw.

Frequent resort was had to the convenient "I don't remember," but this the witness did remember: That he had agreed with Nuttall that he would act in his case for a $200 fee; that afterwards he made an unsolicited reductor $50 from this amount and wanted $31, having collected but $119.

He was also certain that all the money that was raised to make restitution for Nuttall was to be paid into the hands of Undertaker Gilligan and not to him.

The money which he received was given him by Mrs. Nuttall, he said, and he did not collect it from Nuttall's friends.

In a letter to Assistant District-Attorney Fitzgerald, written after his arrest and which was offered in evidence, Curtiss said that he was very sorry that in his desire to get back money which had been paid to him as a fee, his sometime client, Nuttall, had taken occasion to slander Mr. Fitzgerald by saying that he, Curtiss, had said that the money had been paid to Fitzgerald for fees of the District-Attorney's office.

Most of the money was collected from gerald for fees of the District Autority's office.

Most of the money was collected from members of a lodge of Knights of Pythias to which Nuttall belonged, and most of these men were visited four or five times by Curtiss and Mrs Nuttall in the effort to raise the money, though Curtiss denied that any of it was collected by him save from Mrs. Nuttall for his fine.

The recess of court still found the pseudo-Philadelphia lawyer on the rack.

HERCULES VERY MUCH DISGUISED.

A Consumptive Tramp Exerts His Great Strength and Wins a Reward.

A tired looking expressman dragged a heavy Saratoga trunk down the steps at Police Headquarters this morning and tried, with the help of a fifteen-year-old boy, to put it on a truck. He and the trunk and the boy rolled together in the street at the first attempt. The man was so mad that he said disrespectful things to the boy and knocked him into the gutter.

Just then the woman who owned the trunk volunteered some suggestions as to how best get it upon the truck. The expressman glared at her a moment and then, frothing at get it upon the truck. The expressman glared at her a moment and then, frothing at the mouth with rage, he shrieked:

'Shet up! Shet up! We don't want no women round here! Go lay down an' die!"
At this point the front windows of Police Headquarters were filled with faces and a collection of assorted grins. The expressman and his assistant observing their audience again tackled the trunk with desperate courage, but in the collar and elbow contest which ensued the bg box was too much for them and it threw them.

While the Saratoga's victims were digging the snow out of the backs of their necks, a consumptive tramp, with a contemplative cast of countenance and traces of poverty about his raiment, happened along. He stood watching the affray with deep meditation. Finally this philosopher, with a deep sigh, as though regretting that this world should contain so much wasted endeavor, tackled the Saratoga hienself and with a few helpful jogs from the expressman, landed it high and dry on the truck.

There was a half-smothered cheer from headquarters, the woman who had incurred the expressman's indignant protest gave the a Young Mas Accused of Theft. A sad scene was enacted in the Court of General Sessions this morning when Frederick C. Luckey's aged grandfather appeared to plead for mercy for the young man, who had been indicted for grand larceny in the second degree.

The old man said in a voice trembling with emotion: "Your Honor, this boy is my grandson. He has always been a good boy and never made any trouble before."

His utterance was stopped for a moment by a choking in his throat. Then, as he wiped the moisture from his eyes, he went on, half apologetically:
"If we could have a chance in his salva-tion—and you have the power—."

Sheriff Sexton: "Will come down by first train. May be late this afternoon."

Many of the Democratic politicians who were seen at the City Hall to-day expressed opinions that the fight in the State Committee over the election of a member of a National Committee, was the first round in the struggle between the forces of the National and State administrations.

"It was the first real skirmish," said exexcise Commissioner Nicholas Haughton, between the friends of President Cleveland and the friends of Gov. Hill in the fight to capture the delegation from this State to the National Convention.

"Roswell P. Flower is an anti-Cleveland man, while Mowrey, of Syracuse, his opponent for the National Committeeship, is a well-known Administration supporter. Just think of it, thirty ballots, and each candidate receiving seventeen votes, strength in the State Committee than I supposed they had. I thought that the National Administration had a grip on the comto show their hands in the coming Presidential nomination stringle,"

Thomas F. Gilroy, Deputy County Clerk, and one of the secretaries of Tammany Hall, said to the reporter:

"I don't think the result foreshadows anything, I know this. The Tammany Hall members of the committee decided some time ago to vote for Mr. Flower.

"He has always been friendly to our organization, and our committeemen, voted for we do not know of any clashing between the two administrations."

The action of the Kings County members of the committee in voti 4 for Mr. Mowrey, who was supported by the friends of President Cleveland, is occasioning much talk in both cities.

It had been thought in political circles that the Brooklyn machine would pin their faith to Gov. Hill whenever his adherents took a position in national or State politics.

John Y. McKane voted for Mr. Flower, but Mr. McKane is no longer under the sway of the machine.

ings Towards Dr. McGlynn.

Detectives Hanley and Adams and ConsulGeneral Navarro were present.

The prisoner was brought down from Ludlow Street Jail by Deputy-Marshal Bernhard.

Mr. Peter Mitchell, counsel for the prisoner, moved to strike out from the record all the evidence that had been given, as it was immaterial. He asked for the discharge of Benson, as the charge had not been proved.

Col. Quintas, of the Mexican army, was the first witness. He has been in New York for the last seven months, and was in Mexico at the time Benson sold the bogus tickets.

He said that he saw Benson at the Teatro Nacional at the box-office, but he did not see him sell any tickets. He bought two of the bogus tickets.

Detective Sergt. Hanley told about arresting Benson, and also of a conversation which he had with Benson in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

Benson told him he did not sell any tickets.

personally, that the tickets were not forged and that he was certain that he could not be extradited, as there was no name signed to the tickets.

He acknowledged that he had been in Mexico, that he took the proceeds of the sale from the box-office to the hotel, and that he left the City of Mexico on the 4.30 train the next morning.

Detective Sergt. Adams testified that Benson said to him that, while he might be guilty of false pretenses, he could not see where forgery came in and did not think he could be extradited.

The chambermaid cried bitterly as she pleaded guilty. The Court seemed inclined to think that she had repented, and dealt lemently with her. Thirty days was the sentence.

complaint of five Besex County farmers, who accuse him of individual embezzlement. The amounts alleged are as follows: From Tacodore F. Young, of Hantifeld, $170; Jona- Rowell, of Newton, $101; William Coleman, of Andover, $106; John Ayres, of Andover, $131, and Obed O. Wilson, of Andover, $116. Northrup was immensely amused at the charges brought against him. He said to the court that he could oring at least twenty additional farmers to whom he owed similar amounts. They were all honest debts and would be paid when due, but in the case of the complainants not a since of the was due. Justice Otto placed him under $300 ball in each case to go refore Special Bessions, and Alfred Rome, of East Orange, went his ball.

Elisa Porret against Weidner for the recovery of $90,000, which, the woman alleges, Weidner applied to his own use while pretending to have invested it in stocks for her secount. The plaintiff is a French widow, about fifty-five years of age, who was the last owner of the notorious resort in West Thirty-first street known as the "French Madame's," she having purchased the place about fourteen vears ago.

She told her story to an Evening World reporter this morning at the office of her counsel, H. W. Leonard, 28 Broadway. She eemed more disturbed lest she should be reported as being the French madame than she did over the loss of her $90,000. Her story was that in 1881 she first met Widner, who is a short man, about forty-five years old, with a full red beard, and is well known along the curbstones of New street. He represented himself, she said, to be a partner with Charles Garlichs, a member of the Stock Exchange, and offered to invest her money for her so that she would have a million instead of a paltry $100,000 in a short time.

Weidner spoke to her in French, and wrote his business notes to her in the same language. This fact inspired her with more confidence. Frequent demands, she says, were made upon her for money, which she was informed was all invested in stocks at was informed was all invested in stocks at great advantage to her.

Occasionally Weidner would give her a dividend of $25 or $50, but that, she alleges, was only a bait for another $1,000 or so which he would catch the next day.

After a time Mme. Porret became tired of listening to the glowing accounts of the great wealth piled away in the brokers' safes and wanted to see it, but she was put off on one pretext or another, she declares, by Weidner. Broker Garlichs failed in 1885, but it was a year later before the news reached Mme. Porret. She then made a demand_on Weidner for her money or stocks and he said that all her securities had been lost, and asked for time to make good the loss, as he was going into another firm and would continue operations for her.

She refused to have anything further to do operations for her.

She refused to have anything further to do with him, and made efforts to secure a return of her money, which culminated in the order of arrest.

Counsellor Leonard said that Weidner was a man of family and lived in good style, lunching at Delmonico's and summering at Long Branch, He also said that other brokers were concerned in the matter and would be sued. were concerned in the matter and would be sued. ston, brokers at 51 Exchange place, but could not be found there this morning. Both members of the firm denied sny knowledge of the woman in the case, and said that Weidner had dealt individually and squarely with them.

James McCormick, of 30 Broad street, said that he finds from his books that Weidner dealt with him in 1892.

All of the man's transactions with Garlichs were on his individual account.

Rogers & Livingston were of the opinion the Weidner did lose considerable money by the failure of Garlichs in 1885.
